

As you walk in the woods in the middle of the day,
A loud pecking can be heard not very far away.
As you peer into the trees to see what it could be,
You spot the back of a bright red head, which you are surprised to see.
As you move around to get a better look,
You spy a bird with feet that work like a hook.
As you stare in awe at it's long beak,
It shuffles around and takes a peak.
The bird has bright white feathers with a mix of black,
It also has white spots along it s back.
And suddenly with inhuman speed,
It continuously pecks at something unseen in the tree.
The bird then flies away to your despair,
But you still stare in shock as it s broad wings spread in the air.
You walk around the rest of the day with hopes high,
But end up finishing dinner with a depressed sigh.
And as you stare out the window before bed,
You spot a bird flying by with a brilliant red head.